Father McErlane Receives Letter and When He Reaches Hospital Finds Mrs. Dunning Suffering From Poison-Found in Park.

The Reverend Father Daniel McErlane, who visits the City Hospital dally, yesterday received a letter from a woman, who stated that she would arrive at the hospital yesterday, and in the event the drug she was to take did not prove fatal she requested him to see that she was well cared for there. The letter bore two different signatures.

An hour before Father McErlane arrived at the hospital on his usual morning visit, Mrs. Lydia B. Dunning of No. 2815 Lucas avenue was taken to the hospital from Forest Park, where she was found unconscious on a beach by Park Watchman Miles Merrill.

Before Pather Mcilliane arrived the woman regained consciousness, but declined to tell anything regarding herself and refused to divuige her name. Father Mcilliane, thinking she was the writer of the letter, talked to her. She refused to tell the priest anything and denied that she was the writer of the letter.

In refusing to give her name or address she stated that she regretted that her effort at suicide had not proven successful. She made the statement that her troubles would not interest the public, and for that reason alone she would not give out information regarding herself.

Mrs. John Hurck of No. 130 North Sarah street called at the City Hospital later, having heard of a woman being found in the park, and identified the woman as her mother. Mrs. Dunning disappeared from home Thurstay and Mrs. Hurck was searching for her when she learned of an unidentified woman's prescue at the hospital.

Upon seeing the woman lying on a cot. Mrs. Hurck dropped on her knees and wept. Mrs. Dunning admitted having taken carbotle acid with suicidal intent. She said she swallowed a dime's worth of the potsen. Before Pather Mciklane arrived the Sweeney is being held a prisoner at the Sixth District Police Station, notwith-standing the pleadings of Savage and his family that he be released. They all held him blameless and add that they know prisoners awaiting preliminary hearing or trial before Judge Moore. Three of them were women. The doors were tightly locked and, as the sheet of fame shot up-ward from the floor, they were penned in family that he be released. They all hold him blameless and add that they know the shoeting was accidental.

Sweency has been a bearder at the Savage home for several years and is an intimate friend of the family. He is said to be one of Mr. Savage's best friends. Sweency heard someone fall over a chair in the kitchen Tuesday morning. Believing a burgiar was in the house, he called out: "Who's there?" Receiving no answer and seeing a form in the darkness, he fired. The supposed intruder feil to the floor with a bullet in his left side. It lodged in the spine, causing paralysis. Sweency discovered immediately that he had mistaken his friend. Savage, for a burglar, and hurriedly summoned physicians. Sweency explained the shooting and surrendered to the police. He is being held awaiting developments.

Savage has signed a statement in which he requests that Sweency be released, adding that the shooting was accidental. Sweency is nearly crared by grief.

Savage's eldest daughter has visited Sweency every day at the Sixth District Station since he was locked up. She carries his meals to him and on every visit pleads with the Sergeant in charge to release him. like rats.

Meantime the prisoners had crouched back against the wall and two men were trying to tear the bars from the outside window. This gave an ilea that an attempt to escape had been planned.

The prisoners in fail had learned of the fire and heard the shouts. Jailer Dawson quieted them, however, and assured them that they were in no danger.

The blaze scorched the woodwork and blackened the floor, causing damage estimated at about $50.

Florida Friends of J. G. Williams, Assistant District Attorney, Frighten Him by Sending Small Stuffed Alligator.

Some old schoolmates of J. G. Williams Assistant United States District Attorney who recently removed from More's Hill. Mo., to Latona, Fla., caused the prosect tor the scare of his life in conding him a prepaid express package containing a stuffed alligator about a foot and a half lone.

The box was about two feet square and when an expressman carried it into Mr. Williams's office a broad smile overspread the attorney's face in expectation of recelving some fruit or preserves from his relatives in More's Hill.

He raced through nearly every room of the Federal building and returned, still smiling, with a nail-puller in his hand. In another moment he had removed a board from the box, and converting his hands into a shovel, began scooping out the sawdust and straw.

The more he worked the more solemn the expression on his face grew, believing that some heartless person had perpetrated a huge joke on him. "It's a case of show me," said Attorney Williams, and again he delved into the box. When he pulled his hands out, his eyes were set on an object surrounded with straw, but which was shaped something like a pint bottle of "Old Rye."

Looking to see that no one was near, he quietly walked to his desk, where he began to unravel the mystery. The next moment occupants in the adjacent effices were startled by cries of "Snakes! Snakes! Send for the Secret-Service officers." hands into a shovel, began scooping out

Colonel Dyer. "Sounds like it, doesn't it?" volunteered United States Marshal Morsey. At this stage Horace L. Dyer, Assistant United States District Attorney, peeped into the office occupied by Mr. Williams. In the corner fartherest from the crocodile stood Attorney Williams, his face pale and trembling.

"Send for a policeman." shouted Mr. Williams to Mr. Dyer. Two minutes later Attorney Dyer had the alligator in his hands showing it to the other occupants of the office.

"Dead, is it?" queried Mr. Williams, as he walked from the corner into the middle of the floor.

Peals of laughter rang through the great cerridor for several minutes. When they subsided, Attorney Williams, followed by several others, were boarding the elevantee.
